

Words From Regina

You have encouraged me, supported me, and helped me through this storm. You have accepted my phone calls, letters, emails and spent money to come and visit me. You have remained by my side through the good and the bad times. I respect and admire you for being so strong. Your eagerness to be always present and provide amazes me! You are not only my family but my best friends, filling the places of those who have forgotten about me or no longer care to be a part of my life. In my past made choices that altered my life as well as yours.

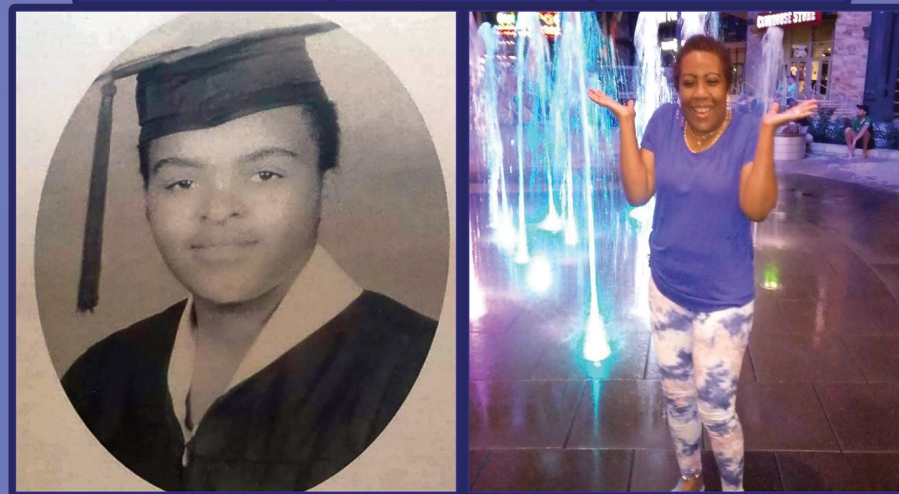

Today is a major step for me, I have learned, grown and hurt through this experience. This journey has made me love myself even more in spite of my mistakes. Each day I am with new challenges from fear, loneliness, sadness, and sometimes anger; but most of all human, but through it all you are and still remain by my side. You are there and your strength keeps me going. Your love keeps me holding on. I love you along with so many other encouraging words that shelters, comforts and restores me. Thanks for showing me love hope and being there still when the storm is soon over.
