From My Brothers

I send you to the restless sun. Awaiting your sweet shine, And in between this world and next I'll hold your hand in mine.

For it is there between the sky And boundless clouds of blue That those who've passed this way before Are waiting there for you.

Life is made of many things, Of love, of grief, of strife. A Young man pulled by many strings, A son, brother, grandson, uncle and cousin

And now those strings will bind no more. You're free to chase the wind. This is where your troubles end, And where your peace begins.
